

SENATORS SAY STORIES ON MISSILES CONFUSION

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate investigators said Tuesday night there was "confusion" between the Russian missile testimony of CIA chief Allen W. Dulles and Gen. Nathan F. Twining, and that Dulles would be recalled to clear it up.

The unexpected development came after a closed-door meeting between Twining, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and members of the Senate Preparedness and Space Committees which are looking into the U.S. missile lag.

Although the nature of the "confusion" was not disclosed, some Democrats left a Jan. 29 briefing by Dulles asserting he had supported their charges that Russia had taken a dangerous rocket lead over this country.

By contrast, Twining was relatively optimistic Tuesday at a public session held before the closed meeting. He disagreed with other U.S. military leaders on their demands for more missiles, more Polaris submarines and faster action to set up a continuous airborne bomber alert.

He said the United States has enough military strength to deter any Russian attack "today or in the foreseeable future."

Honorable Sir -

We like our President because he has mature calmness, and does not let "molehills" become mountains of fear, hate and confusion. Your views on defense seem to conflict with President Eisenhower's views. Because of his experience and intuitive understanding, he is better qualified than anyone else to evaluate our relative position in the world.

Democratic forces are trying to scare votes out of frightened, immature-thinking people. Their constituents are clamoring, too, for inflationary spending. We should be more afraid of an extensive defense structure with "trigger-happy" war-hungry U. S. A. interests behind that structure than we are of the probability of a Russian attack! Anyway, Russia may leave us "holding the bag" by being the first country with sufficient courage to make complete disarmament work!

Mr. Allen W. Dulles, Director
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington 25, D. C.

Dear Allen:

Many thanks to you for your letter of January 9 with its attachments of the photograph, program and brochure as souvenirs of the CIA Cornerstone Ceremony.

This was a memorable occasion for all of those who participated, but especially so for me after you took the trouble to arrange with the President to bring me to the ceremony in his car.

Incidentally, I have just finished reading Arthur Dean's, "An Appreciation", on the subject of your brother, Foster. It gave me a renewed understanding of the important influence of Foster in the world of his time.

It was fine to see Clover and you in Washington last week. Camilla and I send you both our best.

Sincerely,

Ne
